A partnership agreement (MoU) was signed between the Central Asia Barometer (CAB) and the Caucasian Center for International Relations and Strategic Studies (QAFSAM)

After a series of online meetings and discussions, a partnership agreement (MoU) was signed between the Central Asia Barometer (CAB) and the Caucasian Center for International Relations and Strategic Studies (QAFSAM). It is planned to develop cooperation between the parties in the field of development of social sciences. Among the things to be done are the joint research of Central Asia and the Caucasus region, the organization of joint scientific conferences, the publication of scientific articles, and the organization of joint social surveys based on important topics related to the countries of both regions. Both parties believe that this cooperation will contribute both to the development of social sciences and to the deepening of cooperation between the countries of the region, and they will work together on this path.
